

Japanese Culture
The Intersection of Tradition and Modernity
CARD 260/261

What is the role of tradition in a world of ultra-modern cities, super-fast transportation, instantaneous global communication, and futuristic technology? This course will explore the relationship between Japan's past and present by examining its efforts to embrace modernity while remaining distinctly "Japanese." After exploring the relationship between tradition and modernity in the classroom, we will experience the synthesis of traditional and modern culture by visiting various cultural sites in and around Tokyo, Nagoya, Kyoto, Hiroshima and the Kii Peninsula.

Learning Outcomes

Through a combination of readings, lectures, class discussions, and their actual experiences in Japan, students will acquire:

1. a framework for exploring the concept of cultural identity.
2. a general understanding of Japanese history with a particular focus on the historical factors that contributed to the development of modern Japanese identity.
3. perspectives and skills that promote cultural exploration and intercultural understanding.

Spring Semester Assignments

Weekly Reflections: After completing the assigned readings for each class, you will write a one-page (250-word minimum) reflection paper on an issue that you would like to explore further in our class discussion, your final paper and/or during the trip to Japan. You will receive a full 2% for each reflection that you turn in as long as it is turned in prior to the class and demonstrates a sincere attempt to engage with the readings. In short, those who turn in at least ten reflections over the course of the semester will receive the full 20% for this assignment.

Destination Exploration: Before the trip, we will work collaboratively to compile some information about the places we will visit. During our first meeting, each student will sign up for one site to do research on; in subsequent meetings, students will take turns giving short (5-minute) presentations on the destinations they researched with a particular focus on how the site in question represent the intersection of tradition and modernity. For details regarding the assignment requirements see the Destination Exploration Rubric below.

Food for Thought: This assignment is similar to Destination Exploration except that each week a student will make a presentation on a particular type of Japanese food. Your presentation should provide a description of the dish in question as well as a discussion of its cultural significance, such as whether it is an indigenous dish or one that originally came from another culture. For details regarding the assignment requirements see the Food for Thought Rubric below.

Final Paper/Class Presentation: Your final assignment for the classroom portion of the course will be a 6-page essay (1500-word minimum) that develops your own perspective on the intersection of tradition and modernity in contemporary Japan. Your paper should include appropriate references to at least five academic (i.e. peer-reviewed) sources, which may include readings that were assigned for the course. During the final class session, you will make a short (five-minute maximum) presentation on your paper, after which your fellow travelers will have the opportunity to ask you a few questions about your thesis

May Term Requirements

Participation (50%): All group activities during the trip are considered “class” meetings, so your attentive participation is required. Your conduct on the trip will also be reflected in your Participation mark, so please remember that while we are in Japan you are an ambassador of both North Central College and the United States. Japan is a country with a strong sense of proper social behavior, and while they will not expect you to know all of their social norms, you should do your best to respect Japanese behavior patterns. For example, you may notice that people tend to be quiet in public, so while it is okay to talk in hotel lobbies and on trains, you should keep the volume to a reasonable level. In addition to respecting Japanese social norms, please be considerate towards other members of our group, both individually and collectively. For example, if we have to leave the hotel early in the morning to catch a train, make sure that you are in the lobby at the appointed time: the group will not be happy if we miss our train because you slept through your alarm! Think about our group as a big family—and try to avoid conduct that will make it dysfunctional.

BodhiBlog (50%): During the trip, you will be required to maintain a blog of your travels in Japan (we recommend using a free platform such as Tumblr, Weebly, or WordPress). The blog should include thoughtful reflections on the sites that we visit, with a particular emphasis on experiences that highlight the intersection of tradition and modernity. You will have approximately one week after we return from Japan to do additional work on your blog, such as adding photos from the trip, revising your reflections, etc. For additional details, see the BodhiBlog Rubric below.
